ADHD and the law

Challenges from ADHD are likely to meet the definition of a disability under the Equality Act 2010 with or without a diagnosis:

You're disabled under the Equality Act 2010 if you have a physical or mental impairment that has a 'substantial' and 'long-term' negative effect on your ability to do normal daily activities.

What does the law say?

Do my child's views and my views count?

YES

The Local Authority must have regard to:

the views, wishes and feelings of the child and their parent, or the young person;

the importance of them participating as fully as possible in decisions the importance of them being provided with the information and support necessary to enable participation in those decisions;

the need to support them, in order to facilitate the development of the child or young person and to help him or her achieve the best possible educational and other outcomes

Individual support at school

- Effective interaction
- Treat ADHD as a disability for which reasonable adjustments are required, including to the school behaviour policy
- Schools do not have to wait for a formal diagnosis before providing support to pupils.
- SEN Support plan
- Staff training on all types of ADHD
